I grew up Damascus, Syria, where I was always interested in economics. Through the news, I could tell that the economics was transition, and caught between different approaches theories. For this reason, I chose to pursue a Bachelors in economics offered by the Umm Al Qura University (UQU) in Macca.

The program covered the principles of microeconomics macroeconomics, finance, insurance, financial accounting, international economics, energy economics, industrial economics, economics of environmental resources, economics of labor and the Saudi Arabian economy as well as a thorough coverage of commercial law, human resource management, descriptive statistics, inferential statistics, microeconomics, macroeconomics analysis, financial markets, public finance, financial management, business administration, econometrics as well as economic thought history, economic feasibility study and economic development & planning. Though I attained a GPA of 3.04 out of 4.00, my grades in the international economics, business administration, commercial law, mathematical economics, principles of mathematics, energy economics, financial markets, public finance, human resource management, econometrics, economics of labor and the Saudi Arabian economy courses were much higher. After graduation, I continued to attend courses in my area of interest.

After graduation, I obtained a position as a financial controller with Farraj Aloqla Law Firm. During my work at the firm, I submitted and reviewed several financial records for the firm.

The firm was asked to study English in Malaysia for one year. So that I could help the firm in translating its financial statements. Therefore, I arrived in Malaysia in 2020 to study English. I started at Britannia's English Program and continued with the ELS Language center, Kuala Lumpur. Combined, I have had a thorough review of vocabulary and academic writing. I feel that I am now ready to start my Master programme in the English language.

In recent times, the policy of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia has changed, and is supportive of obtaining postgraduate studies in economics in other countries. Thus, I am able to go to the university of my choice. I am very interested in attaining my Master with QMUL, who is a recognized leader in the area of economics. I believe that my Bachelor's degree in economics is an excellent foundation for this area and you're your programme will prepare me for my future goals. When I return to Saudi Arabia, I will be a researcher. As a researcher, I will concentrate on researching and developing some econometric theories and some issues facing the Saudi market. It is my hope to be an advisor for the Saudi financial industry, supporting the creation of new theories and solutions to economic problems.
