

To Whom It May Concern:

I have known Ms. Norah Alharbi for more than four semesters. She was and still is one of the most hardworking students in the Department of Education Polices at King Saud University. During these years she has shown persistent productivity and creativity. That is, she has finished her coursework with high performance and finished her master theses on the topic of the relationship between ethics and education. In terms of Ms. Alharbi interest in the study of foundations of education, she earned her Master's degree in foundations of education from King Saud University, where I had the opportunity to be a member of the committee and I saw the high level of writing and critical thinking she was able to produce. Ms. Alharbi is working on improving her mastery of English while keeping deep engagement with the current educational world-wide debate which will advance the depth and the originality of the dialogue within her educational circle. I believe Ms. Alharbi will be a great advantage to the academic community at your institution.

Abdullah Almutairi, Ph.D
College of Education, King Saud University.
aalmotairi@ksu.edu.sa

A handwritten signature in blue ink, consisting of several overlapping strokes that form a stylized representation of the name Abdullah Almutairi.