To Whom It May Concern
Re: Sara Nahel Abuzenadah
Date of Birth: 27 December 2004

It is an honor to recommend Sara Abuzenadah, a student enrolled at Jeddah Knowledge International School, for the undergraduate programme at your institution. I have known Sara for the past 6 years in my capacity as Pastoral Head, and am presently her CAS coordinator as well as working closely with her with the senior Prefect team.

I previously taught Sara English and it has since been a pleasure to see her utilize her developed language and literary skills in the real world. Sara participates in a number of clubs that test and stretch her abilities in both the spoken and the written and her confidence is apparent. The Jeddah Knowledge Model United Nations (JKSMUN) has been a key forum for students in recent years to develop their awareness of international crisis, solutions and the requirement for international monitoring. It is a platform for the development of wider thinking and orating, in a professional manner, with a high requirement for passion, compassion and decorum. Sara is a committed club member participating in weekly debates and representing her school in the MUN conferences including the recent JKSMUN. As her CAS coordinator I regularly review Sara's activities which include the school newspaper club. Sara is involved in all aspects of the monthly publication and is meticulous in ensuring deadlines and standards are met. Sara ensures that her CAS portfolio tasks are well documented and that her reflections hold evidence of meaningful activities. Sara is a team player and has a highly positive influence on those around her.

Externally, Sara is passionate in sports which include fencing. Sara is a member of the Saudi Fencing Academy and competes at international level. The sport demands dedication, stamina, coordination and boosts processing skills. For Sara, the sport and travel for training and competition has expanded her social and communication skills and developed her team and leadership skills. Sara also rides horse-back and participates in swimming as a sport and has expanded into the challenges of scuba diving.

The school's CAS program has evoked a strong sense of community in Sara which has included volunteering at numerous charitable events including the annual school fete in support of charity. Sara was an outstanding member of the Marketing committee and demonstrated reliability and consistency of character. Sara is a member of the Student Council acting as a voice for the wider student body, undertaking and planning assemblies and school wide activities that celebrate and promote internationally recognized campaigns including her recent promotion and celebration of World Science Day. The Student Council contributes to school spirit and community welfare and Sara is a role model for the lower division students.

On a personal level, Sara is a friendly, caring and self-disciplined student and maintains excellent rapport with peers and staff. She reflects the learner profile attributes of being open-minded, principled, and knowledgeable, a thinker and an inquirer.

Sara's drive and abilities will ensure that she makes an outstanding contribution to any undergraduate program she is applying for. It is for these reasons she comes highly recommended to your institution.

Yours Sincerely,

Ms Sue Sivarajah
