

I would like to start my personal statement by introducing myself. First, my name is Ayah Alfayyadh and I am a fresh high school graduate. Further, I am applying to King's College London to obtain my bachelor's degree in Law studies. The reason why I chose this particular university to study at is because I searched different universities, and it shows that this university offers a powerful Law studies program. In addition, there are more reasons, such as the international campus of the university which will enrich my knowledge on a personal level. Also, the university has a powerful reputation, and it is known as one of the best universities. Further, I am a lady who plans carefully for her future as well as I am committed to my goals, and it starts with obtaining my bachelor's degree in Law studies at your respected university.

Since I was almost 12 years old, I started understanding Law a little bit, and I was fascinated by the way it works. When I grew, my understanding became more profound, and I understood that Law is not limited to certain sectors or cases only, yet it is everything around and behind what we live with today. Therefore, it attracted me and became one of my goals to major in Law studies because I have this urge to understand it deeper and apply it rightfully. Not to mention that Law is a free ticket for a wide range of various types of jobs within a variety of fields. For example, some of these areas under Law are banking and debt finance law, Charity law, Commercial Law, Construction law, Consumer law, Corporate Law, and Criminal Law.

Like any other major in the world, Law studies require certain skills and knowledge along with practice. For this reason, I have always been in continuous learning acquiring new skills, and applying them in my everyday life. Some of the skills I have acquired are strong written and verbal communication skills, leadership skills, commercial awareness, the skill of understanding people, attention to details, time and budget management, organization, planning, discipline, and problem-solving skills. I believe that I found the right major that will challenge me in different ways and the right place to teach me how to deal with such challenges.

I assure you that I am a hardworking, disciplined, self-independent, and highly motivated lady who is always willing to follow her dreams and bring these dreams into reality. I am certain that the King's College London is the place where I will grow to be the best version of my future self. I hope you accept my application to obtain my bachelor's degree in Law studies at the (name) university and give me the opportunity for my first step to achieving academic, personal, and future goals.

Sincerely,
Ayah Alfayyadh
