

With extreme enthusiasm and passion, I decided to major in the field of law and international relations at one of the prestigious institutions around the world, The University of Edinburgh. I am writing this statement of purpose to briefly introduce you to myself, state the reasons for selecting law and international relations as my major, and explain my drives to choosing The University of Edinburgh

First, let me begin with a brief introduction about myself. My name is Yasmeen Khashoggi. I am applying to attain a Bachelor's degree in Law and International Relations. I am a passionate, intelligent, and social individual. I grew up in a family with a number of lawyers, so I have been exposed to the field of law since a young age. I enjoy reading and socializing with people. Through my readings, I started to explore the field of law and learn the principles of this challenging field and respected profession. I believe that my readings led me to develop some skills in conceptual analysis, analytical thinking, and persuasive communication. With regard to socializing, I have always liked meeting people from different cultures and backgrounds which I believe helped me acquire some vital skills in life. At school, I participated in Model United Nations and I am now the deputy head of finance for the school MUN. I believe I have learned a lot from such a role and experience and developed some important skills. For instance, I developed excellent oral and written communication skills, I work great in a team, and I am also good at leadership, time management, and decision-making. Nevertheless, I am joining The Hague International Model United Nations (THIMUN) Foundation which is a great honor to be selected as one of the few students to be participating from different schools worldwide. Thus, with high enthusiasm, I am leaving next week for such an enlightening experience of THIMUN. I am looking forward to specializing in law and international relations and building a profound career in this field.

Obtaining a Bachelor's degree in Law and International Relations will enable me to have the specialized knowledge and professional skills I aspire for. Nevertheless, I will gain competitive qualities in the field by receiving outstanding training from experienced instructors and professionals at your respected institution. In addition, I will learn the fundamentals and principles of such an important field through the academic courses in the undergraduate program. In addition, I am looking forward to developing advanced knowledge and skills concerning legal writing, legal research, public speaking, and presentation, besides delivering legal advice, attending court hearings, and conducting, reviewing, and amending contracts.

I choose to join The University of Edinburgh for its excellent academic programs which will lead to attaining quality education and training in the field of law and international relations. Nevertheless, I believe the esteemed body of instructors and professors at the respected institution will guide me towards gaining new knowledge and honing my skills through their exceptional training. The University of Edinburgh will offer me a culturally diverse community with whom I will share this wonderful experience of enlightenment, growth, and prosperity. I am certain that The University of Edinburgh will allow me to accomplish my goals and reach my dreams.

Sincerely,
Yasmeen Khashoggi
