

Personal Statement

In order for us to live in a happier and fairer world, we should look after each other and care for one another. For me nursing is not only a career but a way for me to contribute towards a better global society.

My inquisitive nature and desire to have a fully-grounded understanding my field of study have enabled me to achieve excellent results in both my academic studies and my working life. Obtaining a MSc. in nursing will allow me to deepen my understanding of my chosen career path, gaining the specialist knowledge that I need to better fulfil my role as a nurse.

Although demanding, nursing is a rewarding career and I look forward to being better equipped to face new challenges with a more expert knowledge of my subject. Whilst it may require a lot of patience and perseverance, experiencing the positive effect that these efforts have on the patient's condition makes the job immediately rewarding.

In order to fulfil my dream of becoming a nurse, I worked hard to be admitted onto the Bachelor of Science course in nursing by Alghad International college for Applied Medical Sciences in Saudi Arabia and I have graduated with good overall grade and GPA of 3.70/5 in 2017. I was overjoyed to be part of the programme; the training was fascinating and reinforced my desire to follow this career path. I was very actively involved in campaign work, raising public awareness of commonly misunderstood or little-known illnesses in schools, hospitals and other public places. I gained much experience in computer skills while completing my studies, and working on the campaign projects made me aware of psychological and social problems that directly affect my job as a nurse even now.

After I graduated, I spent a year working as nursing specialist with experience in the hemodialysis department in Diaverum staff one. Then I worked as experienced nursing specialist in the intensive care unit staff one In Almdinah General Hospital. The start of my employment coincided with the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic and the hospital was turned into an isolation unit dealing solely with coronavirus cases. From hospital admissions, I was moved to the intermediate intensive care unit where I looked after patients who, although very sick, remained conscious. It was in this period that I learned about the role that nurse plays in a clinical setting and where I discovered that I have outstanding skills in building relationships with both the patients and staff members, as well as gaining the patients' trust. Whilst sometimes traumatic, the challenge of thinking on my feet and solving complex problems, as well as the sense of accomplishment at the end of each day, helped me to enjoy working in the intermediate care unite. I realized that, with more specialized knowledge, I would be able to combine my interpersonal skills with a greater understanding of procedure in order to deliver the best care possible.

In Saudi Arabia (KSA) however, there are few opportunities for further study in nursing so I have chosen to study in the United Kingdom. I believe that your remarkable University, with its outstanding research facilities, is precisely the university that will help me to move forward towards becoming the best that I can be. As always, I will strive to give my all and make your institution proud.

After completing the Master's program, I will hope to become a nursing specialist and use the knowledge and experience I have gained to improve healthcare in the future.
