To whom it may concern:

It is a true pleasure for me to write this letter of recommendation for Fares Ashraf Mohamed Ibrahim Barghash, who was my student in Physics. Fares is, without question, one of the most outstanding students I have taught at Al-Alson International School.

Fares is a careful and creative thinker with an eye for details and a devotion to logic, which serves him well both in the sciences and outside them. He has the terrific ability to draw on his own experiences and observations to develop thoughtful opinions on a variety of issues. Fares already knew that he wanted to major in medicine when he took my course, but this did not diminish his intellectual curiosity about the topics covered in Physics. His regular contributions to full-class discussions provided insight both for his peers and for me as an instructor.

Fares was also invaluable in small-group interaction with his peers. Without my asking, he took on the responsibility of helping his classmates consolidate vast amounts of information into coherent set of ideas, and he quickly became a study group leader. In addition, Fares was very generous with his time and energies. I remember him meeting individually with a student from Thailand several times before the final exam to help him master all the material in a foreign tongue.

Fares breaks the "scientist" stereotype with his writings: he was the best writer in the two sections I taught past semesters. And what was perhaps even more impressive was that he took the task of improving his writing as or more seriously than any other student in the class. One of his essays was later published in the annual magazine of the best essays written in Physics`.

Fares is not only an excellent student, but he is also personally delightful. He is as comfortable with himself as he is engaging, pleasant, and humorous. As I got to know Fares over the semesters, I became only more impressed by the wide range of his ability ties and by his modesty about them. He is an accomplished scientist, which he does with a passion rare in high-school students.

I wholeheartedly recommend Fares as a prospective medicine student. In fact, I can think only of few students whom I would recommend as highly.

Please contact me if there is anything else I can do on his behalf.

Sincerely,

Amr Alaa

Physics teacher
