

“Opportunities Don’t often come along.

So, when they do, you have to grab them”-

Audrey Hepburn

As a high school student, you always visualize what your future major, career or path is. As an Imaginative and intuitive person, I’ve always visualized my future in university. During the 11th grade I took a business class, and I absolutely loved it. Learning about financial markets and economics. That is why I want to study finance/financial management.it was particularly my business teacher Mr. Abdulrahman who made me gain interest and love for the subject. And I’m looking forward to studying finance in university next fall.

I have done much research on this subject such as reading my dad’s old business and finance books that have been laying around the house such as (thank you for being late) by Thomas Friedman which discusses how we have entered an age of dizzying acceleration--and explains how to live in it. And I also read (adaptive markets) by Andrew Lo which explores the idea that financial markets are constantly evolving and adapting. It combines concepts from biology, psychology, and economics to shed light on market behavior. And I have watched A couple of ted talks from Mikey Mangham who has makes some excellent points like how us humans need direction in almost everything including financial direction.

I learned quite a lot about finance in school; during business class, I studied about the two sources of finance, internal finance and external finance. and I enjoyed learning about bank loans and debentures, and I love doing presentations. I've done a couple of presentations during my time in school. Communicating is one of my finest skills. I adore captivating listeners and I love to express my ideas clearly.

I take great pleasure in reading books especially self-help books and fictional books I still have a few of physical books but recently I started reading from my kindle, that I find way more enjoyable and accessible. kindles and digital books are way more sustainable than physical copies of books. I am genuinely dedicated to the cause of sustainability. This year I made my whole family sustainable. I love watching documentaries and biopics. I love analyzing them.

One of my greatest aspirations is to establish and operate a sustainable wind farm. and open my own private equity firm, writing a book is one of my aspirations too. I have many aspirations such as directing my own movie and getting into green architecture.

Throughout my time studying I'm looking forward to meeting new people and seeing new faces and learn about new cultures. I'm also looking forward to new opportunities. I'm always looking for new opportunities I want to turn my obstacles into opportunities and my problems into possibilities.
